Disappears at South Framingham While En Route With Father, Who Was Taking Her to School.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 28.—Disappearing mysteriously between Boston and Worcester, while on the way to Peekskill, N. Y., on a Boston and Albany express train Sunday afternoon, no trace as yet has been found of Miss Katharine Keating, 15 years old, daughter of H. S. Keating, a wealthy Dallas, Tex., attorney.

The father was taking the girl from Boston to a private school in Peekskill. He says she had about $15 in her pocket-book and looked 20 instead of 15.

Miss Keating and her father started from Boston for Albany, where they were to change cars for Peekskill. Just previous to the train pulling into South Framingham Mr. Keating left his parlor seat to smoke, returning as the train was possibly 15 or 20 miles from this city to find his daughter gone.

Following she had gone to the women's washroom, the father hurried to the train, but when the train approached Worcester he became worried and started a search of all cars with the aid of the conductor.

No trace of the girl could be found and the father, although in Worcester and wired South Framingham and then notified the local police.

The police of Worcester and South Framingham traced the girl to a trolley car for Worcester. No reason for leaving the train is given by the trolley car driver.

It is believed that the girl was taken to the Peekskill school. He was asked if it was not possible that a romance was responsible, and he answered that as far as he knew there was none.

LIQUOR QUESTION STIRS DELAWARE AS LEADING ISSUE

Lower Portion of State Especially Interested in Subject of License and Party Lines Disregarded.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 28.—Politicians of all parties are worried over the prohibition question. In this county they are of the opinion that the "wets" will be in a majority, and that the question of license will not figure largely in the campaign, but in the lower portion of the State the situation is mixed, and no one can tell what the effect is going to be.

It is said the "wet" and "dry" lines are closer drawn in the lower part of the State than ever before and that residents are aligning themselves on this issue more than with the political parties. In one district a Democrat has been nominated who is a "dry" man and the Republicans there say that they will support him because he is "dry."

In another district a Republican nominated for office may be "dry" and the "dry" Democrats are apparently with him to a man. The same division is being made on men who are "wet."

The Progressives by declaring for State-wide prohibition expect to get all of the "dry" votes, but this they will not do. The "wet" and "dry" people will vote for the men who favor them regardless of party lines, because they consider this the most important question which is to come before the Legislature.

Two years ago the question was not so strongly drawn in respect to legislative candidates, because there was a United States Senator to be elected, and the "wet" and "dry" put aside their differences in order to assist in the election of a man of their own party to the Senate, but this year there is no Senator to be elected. It is therefore regarded as important by those interested in the liquor question that they should elect men of their own views.

THREE POLITICAL PARTIES IN JERSEY CONVENE IN TRENTON

Absence of Excitement in Strong Contrast With Former Times—Governor Fielder Attends.

TRENTON, Sept. 28.—With three big political conventions on in this city today there is scarcely a ripple to distinguish convention day from any other, so quietly are the meetings conducted and so few are the delegates here. The new style of convention, which was urged through the Legislature when Woodrow Wilson was Governor of New Jersey, is in sharp contrast to the old-time shouting, gesticulating, trading, band-playing political meetings. The direct primaries have done away with convention nominations in the State, and now the chief purpose of the getting together of the delegates is the framing of a platform suitable for all the candidates of each party in the campaign. In each convention the Assembly and Senate nominees, the holdover Senators and the State Committee are entitled to attend as delegates. The Governor of the State is entitled to participate in the convention of his party, and, therefore, Governor Fielder attended the Democratic convention.
